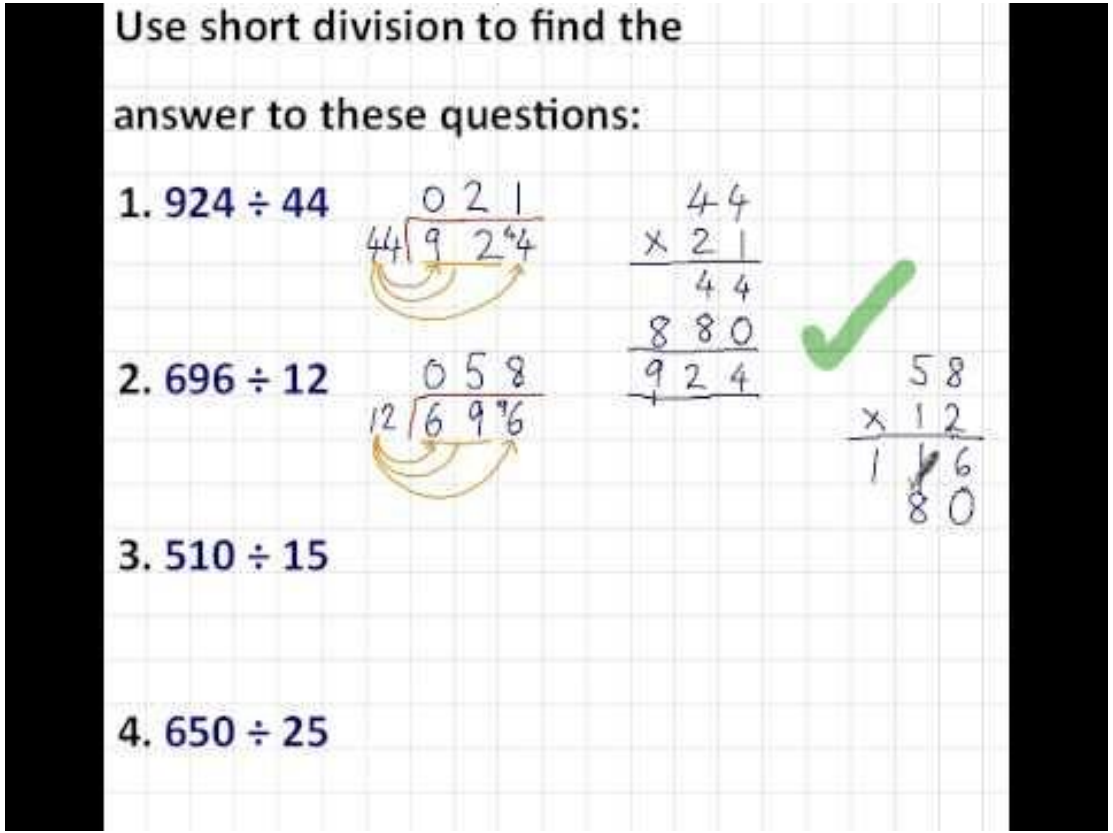
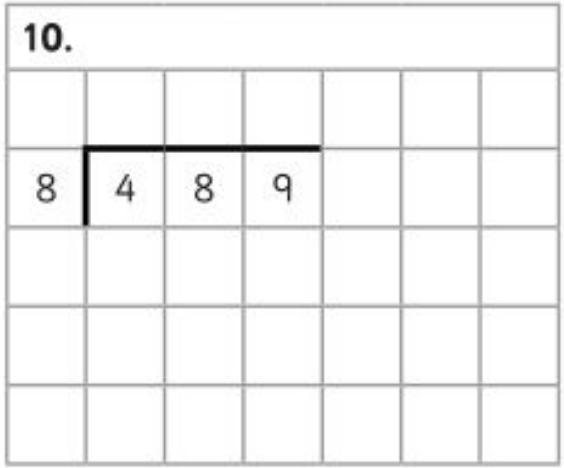
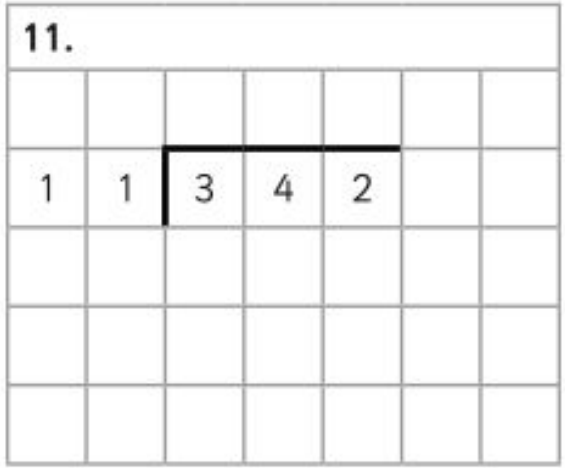
Ms McTaggart's Group

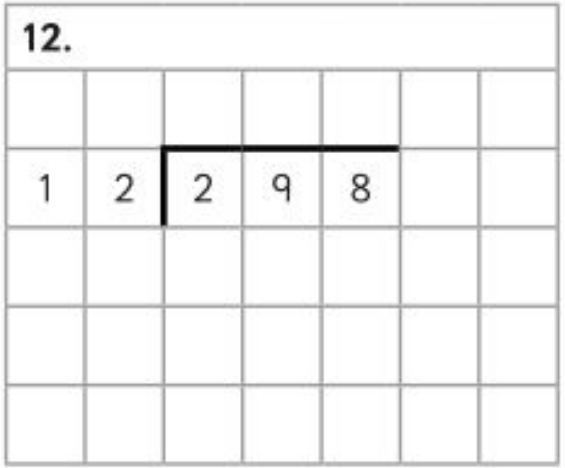
You're stepping up to having a 2 digit divisor. Watch this video to see the technique. (It's from YouTube and not one of your teachers).



Ms McTaggart's Group







A more simple one for you to warm up on!

Literacy

Using this bare bones table pick a part from each and write me a 10 sentence story.

Try writing a new story with 2 sentences per section.

Start with a main character and a big problem (that their powers have caused)	Haunted/abandoned asylum derelict/ dilapidated building The woods Anywhere in the dark Abandoned factory/building Graveyard Sewers disused park
Main character escapes from problem but someone is chasing	Flashlight to get out/ some tools Open drain Glimpse of light Phone to get out of danger Get out through the window	Crazy person could be chasing you Ghosts Some sort of scary doll Animals Darkness Police zombies
Main character nearly gets caught	Unknown, magical force Traps in the place Random scary people All the doors in the building suddenly lock Noises distract you
Main character uses powers to escape…for now	You might use your powers Fight your way out Use tools to get out You might have to complete a challenge Friend could come and help you Could use your phone
Leave the reader wondering…	Main character had an adventure but had only been gone for a minute Could have been in big fight/adventure but when you get home there's no scratches When you get home parents aren't there Parents think you've not even left the house You're already at home and see yourself through the window Somebody is still in your house- noises, movement Could be note left

WALT code a cartoon

Follow on from last week - choose another scene to animate into a cartoon.

Your mission is simple...

Using the the information you have learnt about Shackleton, pick a small part of the story and bring it to life in your own cartoon!

It does not have to be complicated, just use your imagination!

This is the tutorial you are going to use.
